

Greatest of Bull Fights at Celery-Vig Park Has Been Postponed to Saturday, Aug. 18

Torreador Tantalizing the Bull

Due to the severe storm which has fallen over the valley for the past few days it has been impossible to show the great burlesque bull fight which was scheduled to be held at Celery-Vig park last evening.

However, on Saturday evening, August 18, the fight will be staged, and if rest counts for anything, the bull should have plenty of "pep" by then. This fight will be shown in detail, and it will no doubt be a treat for both young and old.

The torreadors, who are entering this event, are the real thing and have all but lost their lives tantalizing this wild bull which will be in action next Saturday evening. Arizona is noted for its clever cowboys who are all good riders, but these noble steeds at Celery-Vig, which will be ridden by the torreadors, have made lots of them quiet, as they are the wildest horses in captivity.

If you want real comedy, filled with thrills, heart-throbs and excitement, go to Celery-Vig park next Saturday night.

BEAUTIFUL MYSTERY GIRL IS NO MYSTERY

The beautiful mystery woman described in reports from Tucson when "Captain" J. Fernandez Terrazas, alleged son of the great Spanish land-lords of old Mexico, was arrested there Thursday, and held for investigation, is none other than Grace Landis, possessor of a long police record in Phoenix, the Phoenix police announced last night.

Warrants were about to be served upon Terrazas, Grace Landis and another man and woman in Phoenix, charging them with a misdemeanor.

WHAT YOU WANT TO FIND WHEN YOU BUY A CAR

You want to make, you want to sell and you want to drive a car whose whole range of power is controlled by a little finger-lever on the steering wheel; whose gears are always in mesh, so that you never have to separate your power from your load in order to change your car speed—especially when you are compelled to do it unexpectedly in dangerous places, on Fifth Avenue, on Rush Street Bridge or in the mountains;

—whose power is built up in advance ready for instantaneous application to the rear wheels at your merest wish;

—whose power does not depend upon the speed of a fly-wheel, which can be accelerated only after the critical emergency has arisen;

—whose maximum torque can be applied to the wheels under the most adverse conditions, giving fullest efforts at lowest speeds—at one mile an hour if the hill or mud requires it—without relation to the speed of the engine;

—which has only two cylinders, and a crankshaft only eight inches long and yet has a hundred per cent torque on the crankshaft continuously, without "impulses"—without even "over-lapping impulses";

—whose crankshaft is parallel to the rear axle so that no right angles must be turned by the power;

—whose engine is at the nearest possible point to the driving axle—geared right into it in fact, so that no jointed drive shafts are necessary;

—which has only thirty-seven moving parts in the complete vehicle;

—whose power is not created by turning the engine cylinder into a fire-box, but is generated with no moving parts to be exposed to the heat and the gases;

—whose power can be built up without operating the engine, or whose engine can deliver this power without waiting for combustion;

—whose fuel is supplied for consumption without the aid of a carburetor or other outside atomizing or vaporizing device;

—and whose fuel is kerosene.

And Now You Learn How to Get Perfect Performance

If you accept these as the attributes of the car you want to make, to sell and to drive, then we will accept the responsibility of affirming that they can be had only with steam.

As soon as the public realizes that these attributes are to be had in an automobile, and that the limitations of the internal-explosive engine have already been reached without yielding them, the manufacturers must abandon their present power plant and substitute therefore, the steam boiler and burner. The boiler will be of the fire-tube, water-level type, to permit great storage of power; and the burner will be equipped with a pilot to maintain that power when standing.

These, we think, are the attributes of the performance which all motorists want and all manufacturers are trying honestly to give.

This, we think, is akin to the performance which the early pioneers hoped for, and courageously set out to attain.

This, we think, is akin to the vehicle which the ancients dared not even to desire for themselves—the vehicle which to them was worthy only of the Gods. This is actually the Stanley Steamer.

'T WAS NO TASK FOR A REPUBLICAN WANT AD

The uncanny certainty with which The Republican Want Ads recover lost, stolen or strayed articles was again demonstrated yesterday when W. H. Stilwell recovered a valuable statute book, which he believed either lost, stolen or strayed, as he could find no trace of it in his office, and in fact knew absolutely nothing about what had befallen that particular book. So, wisely, Mr. Stilwell inserted an ad in the columns of The Republican, advertising his loss.

Proud of the effort of his facile pen, Mr. Stilwell took the paper containing his ad into the office of a neighboring lawyer to show him his literary masterpiece, when lo and behold, that worthy lawyer, with a somewhat guilty look on his face, brought forth the volume in question with the remark that he had borrowed it and forgot to return it.

Of course, they soon came to an agreement regarding the matter and made a settlement out of court, but, nevertheless, they found out through this experience that small matters often will solve huge problems, and that a little want ad in The Republican will invariably recover even the most thoroughly lost objects.
